1 Introduction

The Fiji Women’s Fund (the Fund) is an AU$10.5 million initiative supported by the Australian Government from 2017-2022, through its Pacific Women Shaping Pacific Development (Pacific Women) program. The Fund aims to provide funding and capacity development support to women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji to expand and enhance their work on women’s empowerment and gender equality.

By the end of 2022, the Fund aims to become an independently funded and locally managed women’s fund.

Strategic communication is an integral part of the Fund’s commitment to promote women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji. The Fund’s Communication Strategy aims to provide guidance to the Fund’s management team in effectively and strategically engaging with partners and stakeholders to achieve its mission. The Strategy acknowledges that practicing communications for development is key for an initiative like the Fund, as it goes beyond providing information. As such continual engagement with partners and stakeholders will be undertaken to develop new and improved ways to communicate and strengthen engagement.

There are some key communication challenges for the Fund, which this Strategy seeks to address. The program’s design highlighted some of these challenges, which include: meaningful engagement with women living in rural and remote locations and those who are marginalised; varying levels of human rights-based approach in programming by partners; and building local ownership, independence and sustainability of the Fund. The Strategy seeks to undertake a range of interactive activities with partners and stakeholders to address these challenges. This approach will demonstrate the Fund’s commitment to:

» Use appropriate and accessible channels to engage with a wide-range of women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji. Information shared will be adapted to partners and stakeholders’ needs.

» Identify, strengthen and raise the profile of women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji it funds (called grantees from here on), which promote and protect the human rights of women. The Fund seeks to strengthen the capacity of grantees to address the challenges they face in understanding, embracing and applying gender-responsive and human rights-based approaches.

» Establish itself as a trusted partner in contributing to women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.

» Ensure that partners and stakeholder feel they trust and own knowledge shared through the Fund and can utilise this knowledge to drive change to improve women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.

» Secure funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy post 2022 to ensure its sustainability, independence and local ownership.

2 Background

The Fund is a significant and innovative investment by Pacific Women under its Fiji Country Plan, reflecting the Government of Fiji and Government of Australia’s shared commitment to advancing women’s empowerment and gender equality in the country.
In January 2015, Australia’s Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) commissioned a civil society sector analysis that included a specific focus on women’s civil society organisations (CSOs). The analysis recommended that DFAT investigate the feasibility of establishing a locally managed women’s fund to support women-focused CSOs in Fiji.

There is growing evidence that supporting women’s organisations and the women’s movement is the most effective way to bring about gender equality. Among recommendations from the global women’s movement is for donors to channel funding to women’s organisations. Women’s funds are seen as flexible, responsive, and accessible mechanisms for supporting women’s groups, networks, and organisations to advance gender equality.

In November 2015, DFAT commissioned a three-member design team to develop the Fund. The design team consulted with a range of stakeholders including key women’s CSOs and rural women’s groups, government, private sector and development partners. The consultation highlighted the positive interest and support from women’s CSOs for the Fund to be locally owned and managed. However, there was strong consensus among women’s organisations that the process for localising the Fund required time and planning, and that this would be the key focus of the Fund while it is supported by DFAT over the seven years.

One of the key objectives of the Fund is to reach women living in rural and remote locations and those who are marginalised. This includes women with disabilities and those facing discrimination due to their sexual orientation and/or gender identity. This focus aligns well with DFAT’s Aid Investment Plan for Fiji, which recognises rising inequality among rural women, people with disabilities and other marginalised groups.

The Fund contributes to the Fiji Government’s key gender equality strategies that promote empowerment of women and girls and gender equality in Fiji. The National Women’s Plan of Action and National Gender Policy frame this empowerment process and is driven by the Ministry of Women, Children and Poverty Alleviation.

The aim of the Fund is to become an independently funded and locally managed women’s fund by the end of 2022. It seeks the following outcomes:

» Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are empowered and have the capacity (knowledge, skills, resources and relationships) to contribute to transformative change that improves women’s lives.

» Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are having influence at different levels (individual / systemic and formal / informal) and are contributing to transformative change in women’s lives.

» The Fund has transitioned to an independent local entity and has secured funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy.

The Fund is initially co-located with the existing Pacific Women Support Unit office in Suva, Fiji and operates as an independent entity to support grant and capacity development activities of Fiji-based implementing partners. An initial Fund implementation team comprises of the Fund Manager, the Finance and Administration Officer, two Program Officers, the Capacity Building Specialist and the Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning Officer. Cardno in Melbourne supports the implementation team.
The Fund has established a Steering Committee to provide overall strategic guidance and support to the Fund including the allocation of funds. It is comprised of representatives from DFAT; the Fiji Ministry of Women, Children and Poverty Alleviation’s Department of Women; the Pacific Women Support Unit; women’s CSOs; and the Fijian private sector. The Fund has also established a Grants Committee to assess and select proposals for funding and/or technical assistance allocation. It is comprised of representatives from DFAT, the Pacific Women Support Unit, and the Steering Committee.

The Fund has an annual grant cycle with a specific selection criterion that includes supporting initiatives seeking to:

» Eliminate violence against women.
» Empower women through increased economic opportunities.
» Improve women’s participation in leadership and decision-making.
» Strengthen women’s groups and coalitions for change.

The above is in line with the program-level intended outcomes of the broader Pacific Women program.

3 Why the Fund needs a communications strategy

The Fund’s design document acknowledges that strategic and effective communications, learning, and information sharing are key to the success of the Fund. Clear communication on the work and success of the Fund is also important to securing funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy and transitioning into an independent local entity by 2022. The Communications Strategy therefore, serves a range of purposes, which includes:

» Ensuring relevant information, learning and research is shared with all partners and stakeholders, with a particular focus on women’s organisations and women from rural, remote and marginalised communities to promote accountability, transparency and local ownership of the Fund.
» Emphasising reflective practice for itself and among grantees, where the Fund invests time in site visits meetings and informal discussions with grantees as a core part of the Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning (MEL) system. Staff will then be able to support the external communication of results and learning as well as identify opportunities for collective action and to link grantee initiatives or link them with other relevant stakeholders. Pacific Women in Fiji will co-convene Annual Reflection Workshops with the Fund as part of their program learning process, which Fiji Fund grantees will benefit from.
» Collaborating with partners and stakeholders including grantees, other Pacific Women's implementing partners and DFAT programs, CSOs, national government ministries and departments, regional and international development programs and organisations, United Nations organisations, global women’s movement and women’s funds and, donors, private sector and local philanthropy.
» Promoting greater coordination and cooperation between existing and new networks and partnerships.
» Continually improving ways to communicate and strengthen engagement using technology and media (especially social media).
4 Key communication principles

- Ensure information and communication materials are of high quality, simple, easy to understand, accessible and communicated in a respectful manner.
- Information is evidence-based, informed by women’s lived experiences and reflect intersectionalities.
- Amplify the voices of women, and raise consciousness and awareness about women’s stories and struggles, especially of those often marginalised. These include women living in rural and remote locations, women with disabilities, and those facing discrimination due to their sexual orientation and / or gender identity.
- Represent women as actors, change agents and survivors.
- Avoid perpetuating gender stereotypes. The Fund must challenge and change gender stereotypes that are harmful and disempower women by addressing regressive (cultural and traditional) beliefs.
- Connect and communicate the main problems the Fund aims to address with broader social issues.
- Produce content in democratic and collaborative ways, giving space to all voices and supporting women to tell their own stories.
- The Fund must avoid being extractive in nature when procuring content and implement relevant feedback loops to women, communities and stakeholders it obtains information from.
- Procure informed and continuous consent of any testimonials (quotations and interviews) and audio / visual material.
- Promote systematic learning and sharing between the Fund, partners and stakeholders.
- Abide by the ‘do no harm’ principle by regularly identifying backlash or negative consequences for women and children involved in the Fund’s work. This also includes providing information to women that might affect their lives, in an open and transparent manner.

5 Goals and objectives

The goal of the Communications Strategy is to provide guidance to the Fund’s management team to effectively and strategically engage with partners and stakeholders to promote and contribute towards women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.

The Strategy, a living document, seeks to achieve seven objectives.

- Identify any key barriers to communication with partners and stakeholders, and use appropriate mediums to successfully overcome them.
- Inform existing and potential partners and stakeholders of the intent, progress, successes, and opportunities available with the Fund.
- Advocate for women’s empowerment and gender equality through improved political, economic and social opportunities for women in Fiji.
- Contribute information and data that can be used to monitor and evaluate the impact and effectiveness of the Fund.
- Provide a platform for its partners to share news, events, resources and information about initiatives relevant to the program’s key result areas.
- Strengthen the capacity of partners to effectively use communications to promote women’s empowerment and gender equality.
Raise the profile and credibility of the Fund with existing and potential donors, private sector and local philanthropy to secure future funding, enabling the Fund to become independently funded and managed by 2022.

6 Key messages

The key messages were identified as relevant for the inception stage of the Fund. As the Fund evolves in implementation, messages may evolve to reflect the changes. The following messages should be repeated clearly and consistently in all Fund communications:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Key Message</th>
<th>Rationale</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Achieving women’s empowerment and gender equality is crucial to the political, economic and social development of Fiji.</td>
<td>This message provides a viable link between women’s empowerment and gender equality, and the economic and social development of Fiji. This message will support the Fund in engaging a wider audience.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The causes and consequences of gender inequality are complex and interrelated. Effective responses must be flexible to Fiji’s political, cultural and social contexts.</td>
<td>This message provides a simple definition of gender equality and may help to address fears that women’s empowerment and gender equality is not compatible with Fiji’s culture and traditions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Women’s groups, networks, and organisations are crucial to achieving women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.</td>
<td>This message emphasises the importance of investing in women’s groups, networks, and organisations to strengthen the women’s movement as they continue working towards women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Fund is a grant mechanism that provides funding and capacity development support to women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji to expand and enhance their work on women’s empowerment and gender equality.</td>
<td>This message clearly states the core function of the Fund and its main implementing partner(s).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Fund can play a role in supporting women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji through funding efforts of the women’s movement and supporting capacity development.</td>
<td>This message acknowledges the key role of the women’s movement in contributing to women’s empowerment and gender equality; the importance of investing and strengthening their efforts; and the supportive role the Fund can play to facilitate this.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Fund is flexible, responsive and an accessible mechanism for supporting the women’s movement to advance gender equality in Fiji.</td>
<td>This message provides a reason for women’s groups, networks, and organisations to consider applying for funding from the Fund, and for donors to consider supporting the Fund. It sets it apart from other grant mechanisms.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Fund is an Australian Government funded initiative, supporting local efforts and will transition into an independently funded and locally managed women’s fund by the end of 2022.</td>
<td>This message articulates the role of the Australian Government as one that supports and compliments (and not replaces or competes) with local initiatives. It also articulates the Fund’s transition plans. When the Fund becomes independently funded, the Australian Government’s initial support will be acknowledged.</td>

7 Roles, responsibilities and resources

The Fund’s implementation team, in particular, the Fund’s Communications Officer, based in Suva will be responsible for the implementation and coordination of the Communications Strategy, with technical support from Cardno, and input from DFAT. The implementation team will maintain a database of communication professionals (such as writers, editors, designers, and photographers) who can be engaged, as necessary, to support the delivery of communication activities.

All members of the implementation team, and relevant Cardno and DFAT management staff involved will have a role to play in communications and must adhere to the Fund’s key communication principles (in Section 3).

The implementation team will ensure all communication activities materials follow the Fund’s style guide, which is in line with DFAT’s branding guidelines (see Annex 3).

The Fund Manager is the spokesperson for the Fund. All media queries, related to the day-to-day operations of the Fund will be directed to the Fund’s Communications Officer in the first instance, who, in consultation with the Fund Manager will address queries as directed. Any media query seeking commentary on Australia’s support for the Fund will need DFAT input and endorsement. The Fund Manager will work closely with DFAT to obtain this or direct the media to DFAT’s Public Affairs Division. Any media query seeking commentary on the Fiji Government’s support will need input and endorsement from the Director of the Department of Women who is a member of the Fund’s Steering Committee.

The Strategy will be reviewed annually with the implementation plan updated during the annual planning process. The team will also incorporate capacity development support for grantees during this process.

For the implementation of the Communication Strategy, resources will be utilised to: build and maintain a website; produce bi-annual newsletters, progress reports, learning papers, brochures, videos and other promotional materials; building and maintain a multimedia repository; support capacity development; and engage short-term technical expertise.

The Fund’s Communications Strategy is in line with Pacific Women’s Communication Strategy. In this vein, the Fund’s website will have links to the Pacific Women’s website and vice versa.

8 Relationships

The Fund will seek to develop effective and strategic, two-way engagement with its partners and stakeholders, in order to achieve the objectives of the Communication Strategy.

![Diagram of Partners and stakeholders]

Partners are agencies that have formal relationships with the Fund and contribute directly to its implementation. Stakeholders are part of a broader group of agencies with which the Fund may have no formal relationship but who are also important to the Fund’s success.
8.1 Methodology

To ascertain the information and communication need of each partner and stakeholder group and the channels of engagement most appropriate and accessible for them, the Fund sought feedback from representatives of the above agencies. Online platform Survey Monkey (see Annex 9 for list of respondents and questions) was used to gather feedback and due care was taken to seek feedback from representatives of women in rural and remote locations, women with disabilities, and those with diverse sexual orientation and/or gender identity. Phone calls were made prior to sending the survey link to ensure accessibility for respondents who may face challenges, with an offer to seek feedback over the phone or face-to-face. In this instance, all 28 respondents had access to the Internet to complete the survey. This does indicate that access to Internet may not be an issue for all members of the partner and stakeholder groups, however, it should not be taken as a given that all have regular access and that everyone in their membership has access. For example, the focal point for grantee organisation, the Delailasakau Women’s Group from Naitasiri, does have regular access to the Internet, but the rest of the membership does not.
The table below summarises the information and communications needs and the preferred channels of engagement of partners and stakeholders with the Fund. Section 7.3 highlights accessibility challenges.

Public
» They should be aware that the Fund was created to support the efforts of the Fijian women’s movement towards women’s empowerment and gender equality. This reaffirms local ownership.
» They should be aware of the core mission of the Fund, its intended outcomes.
» They should be aware of the scope of the Fund’s work.
» They should be aware of the progress of the Fund’s work, especially its successes.
» They should be aware of the Fund’s transition plans into an independent entity by 2022.
8.2 Accessibility

In order for the Fund to effectively engage with all its partners and stakeholders, accessibility must be ensured. The Fund will continually identify and address, to the best of its ability and availability of resources, accessibility challenges. Partners and stakeholders have highlighted the following in the survey:

Literacy: fluency in English is not a guarantee for all, especially those in rural and remote communities. Any communication that concerns groups with literacy concerns must be written simply, in an easy to understand manner, without any technical jargons, and if possible in the vernacular. Use of visuals is encouraged. Important emails must also be followed up with phone calls to ensure there is no ambiguity. Vernacular radio stations are also important channels for awareness and advocacy.

Internet connectivity: around fifty per cent\(^1\) of Fiji’s population do not have access to the Internet. In the Fund’s case, for example, in some circumstances, only the focal point of the Fund’s grantee organisation may have access to the Internet, with no guarantee if the access is regular and extends to rest of community. In this case, important information must be communicated by phone and sent through other accessible means, such as hard copies of the Fund’s newsletters and newspaper supplements. Radio should be utilised for awareness and advocacy campaigns for their wide reach.

Disability:

- Hearing:
  - Use of sign language interpreters; and
  - Ensuring videos including televised materials have captions in English.

- Visual:
  - Materials to be available in an electronic format that is compatible with a screen reader;\(^2\)
  - Documents are preferred to be in Microsoft Word format, including (application) forms, newsletters, reports, and so on;
  - Any images in documents and posted on websites and social media platforms must include a descriptive text.

Websites must be compliant with World Wide Accessibility Standards, which seeks accessibility for people with a diverse range of hearing, movement, sight, and cognitive ability.

9 Communication activities

As the Fund operates in a complex environment with the aim of fostering local ownership with the Fiji women’s movement and transitioning to an independent local entity – an ambitious and untested goal – the Communications Strategy does not seek to provide an exhaustive list of the Fund’s communication activities. As such, the Strategy will be reviewed annually with the implementation

---

2 Stakeholders have identified Job Access with Speech or JAWS as the most commonly used. Another one is NonVisual Desktop Access or NV Access.
Communications Strategy 2018–2022

plan updated during the annual planning process (see Annex 1: The Fund’s Communications Implementation Plan January 2018 – June 2019).

A combination of digital platforms and traditional channels (such as phone calls, meetings, site visits, networking events, newspaper, radio and television) is suggested to reach the Fund’s partners and stakeholders. There is evidence to suggest that a growing number of Fijians own mobile phones, which they use to access the Internet – subsequently, the use of social media has increased in Fiji (and the Pacific). However, not all Fijians have Internet access, and the quality of Internet service varies from urban to rural and remote areas. The survey undertaken by the Fund in the development of this Strategy also confirms the need for multiple channels of communications as requested by partners and stakeholders. The Fund’s partners and stakeholders will more likely be influenced when there are multiple and coordinated modes of communication that reinforce key messages and adapt to their context.

This section of the Strategy provides details on the range of current and planned communications activities of the Fund, and outlines which objectives the activity aims to meet, as well as target partner and stakeholder groups. The activities can be divided into five categories:

» Building and supporting digital platforms for sharing information
» Content curation and brand identity
» Research and knowledge building
» Advocacy and networking
» Developing capacity for strategic communications

9.1 Building and supporting digital platforms for sharing information

Platforms for engaging and sharing information include the Fund’s website, e-updates, bi-annual newsletters (electronic and printed), and social media pages.

9.1.1 Website

Meeting objective: All

Relevance to target audience: All

The Fund’s website will be the central hub for all Fund communications, including information on gender equality in Fiji, the scope of the Fund’s work, funding opportunities and eligibility criteria, partnership opportunities, latest news on activities and events, progress reports, E-Updates and newsletters, case studies, partners the Fund works with, learnings, employment opportunities, and so on. New content will be proactively sourced during site visits, events, from partners and stakeholders, particularly from grantees and stakeholders working in areas relevant to the Fund. The website will ensure wide user appeal and accessibility, particularly for women in rural and remote areas and those with disability. It will have accessibility of language, be mobile responsive and integrated with social media.

The Fund will develop a detailed proposal for the website, with an intention to launch it by June 2018.

9.1.2 E-updates

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

E-Updates will be a collation of latest updates (news, opportunities, publications, and so on) from the Fund sent to partners and stakeholder groups who have access to the Internet, in a list format. Online platform MailChimp will be used to send these updates, which will only contain the title and either the first paragraph of the news item or a 50-word summary linking it back to the website for further reading. The two main objectives for E-Updates are:

» To send a diverse range and number of updates in one instance or as they happen. In this way, the Fund does not have to wait for the two newsletters (with a fixed release date) to prompt readers to read the latest news. Updates with only one news item can also be sent via this channel.

» To drive traffic to the website.

Users can either subscribe to this service via the website and decide how frequently they want to receive the updates. The collation of these updates is not expected to be time consuming and will only contain pre-approved information, like all other Fund communication.

9.1.3 Social media

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

To use social media as a use of persuasion – rather than as a one-way public relations exercise – it will be essential to interact regularly with online users. Partners and stakeholders have indicated Facebook and Twitter as the most preferred social media platform, followed by LinkedIn and Instagram. YouTube and Flickr have also been identified as important public repository platforms for videos and photographs.

Recent statistics also show that 34 per cent of active Facebook users in Fiji are women, and that 94 per cent of Facebook users access the platform via their mobile phones.4

This strategy suggests setting up Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and Flickr in 2018. The use of LinkedIn, Instagram and other platforms, including assessing the effectiveness of existing platforms are to be undertaken during the annual review.

A guideline for the Fund’s use of social media, including moderation and approval processes, aligned with DFAT’s Digital Media Strategy 2016-2018 is included as Annex 4.

9.2 Content Curation and Brand Identity

The Fund will produce and commission the production of content in a variety of forms. The content will be based on data and information from the Fund’s work. It will be presented in a manner to highlight the Fund’s contribution to achieve change and advance women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji. Content produced will include progress reports (six-monthly reports for internal use only and annual reports, available externally), newsletters, a multimedia repository, infographics, case studies, videos, brand book and branding materials (such as brochures and banners).

9.2.1 Six-monthly progress reports

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: Steering Committee, DFAT and Pacific Women

The Six-Monthly Progress is an internal narrative and financial report, which provides an assessment of the progress towards the Fund’s outcomes and an update on outputs, major achievements, challenges and gaps. Reporting period is between January-June and is finalised by August. It is compiled by the Fund’s implementation team and is an imperative document for good management and learning.

9.2.2 Annual progress report

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

The Annual Progress Report will provide a snapshot of the Fund’s achievements and challenges, as well as an outline of activities planned for the year ahead. It will demonstrate the Fund’s underpinning principles, collaborate and consultative approach, and commitment to reflection and learning. It is finalised by February-March every year. The Annual Progress Report is a valuable document that showcases the impact of the Fund’s work and a useful communications product for sourcing future funds.

9.2.3 Newsletter

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

The Fund’s newsletter, produced twice a year, will be an effective and efficient tool for disseminating in-depth stories and latest information. It will be used to promote stories of success from the Fund. The newsletter content will be based on the Fund’s MEL findings and engagement with partners and stakeholders. It can be adapted for other communications, such as E-Updates, progress reports, press releases and social media posts.

The newsletter will be available in electronic format (as a PDF) on the website and disseminated to partners and shareholders via E-updates and email. An electronic copy in Microsoft Word format will be also be available for partners and stakeholders who have a visual disability and use a screen reader.

Printed copies will be posted to those partners who do not have Internet access.

9.2.4 Photographs and videos

Meeting objective: 1-4, 7

Relevance to target audience: All
High quality photographs of partners and stakeholders of the Fund will be used, with written consent, to convey key messages on women’s empowerment and gender equality. Primarily, these photographs will be used to accompany stories about the partners and stakeholders work. The photographs may be published on all the Fund’s platforms and communication materials and may be shared with partners and stakeholders.

Photographers will include the Fund, as well as freelance photographers, when appropriate. All photographers must follow DFAT’s Guidelines on Ethical Photography and Videography (copy available with the Fund), the Fund’s key communication principles (see Section 3) and procure informed consent (see Annex 6 for template).

The Fund may record videos during its MEL exercises with the grantees and produce professional promotional and program related videos on the Fund. As with photography, all videographers must follow DFAT’s Guidelines on Ethical Photography and Videography (copy available with the Fund), the Fund’s key communication principles (see Section 3) and procure informed consent (see Annex 6 for template).

9.2.5 Multimedia repository

Meeting objective: 1-4, 7

Relevance to target audience: Partners

The Fund will procure audio/visual content such as photographs, videos and audio for MEL purposes as well as for its various communications needs. To ensure all content is kept in an organised manner, ensuring safety, confidentiality and ease of access by staff, the development of an internal knowledge management system is proposed. Aside from its own communication use, the Fund is in a unique position to provide its partners and stakeholders audio/visual material upon request. An up-to-date multimedia repository with all essential information, including consent forms, will enable the Fund to do this promptly and appropriately.

9.2.6 Infographics

Meeting objective: 1-4, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

The Fund may use infographics, where appropriate to make complex information eye catching, shareable and easily digestible.

9.2.7 Branding and promotional materials

Meeting objective: 1-4, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

An initial style guide is included as an annex in this Communications Strategy, however the Fund intends to develop a comprehensive and high-quality brand book that explains the Fund’s identity and presents its brand standards. Aside from the design aspect, the Fund’s brand book will also include program overview and communication guideline. Once done, the Fund can share it with communication professionals and other relevant individuals and agencies it contracts to undertake design and writing.
The Fund intends to produce electronic and printed brochures, giving essential information on the Fund, as well as banners for events. Overtime the Fund will determine if it needs to produce other materials, based on need and availability of resources.

1.1. Research and knowledge building

Meeting objective: 1-5, 7

Relevance to target audience: All

The Fund is developing an integrated approach to the functions of MEL, research and communications. To support this approach the Fund will contribute to and utilise Pacific Women’s knowledge management database to compile program results. Using this database, with support from the Pacific Women Support Unit, the Fund will ensure that relevant findings and lessons learned are communicated in ways that are appropriately tailored to the needs of partners and stakeholders.

The Fund will be commissioning research to inform its work and programming, as well as support research undertaken by grantees. Using the Pacific Women’s Research Strategy, the Fund will utilise all opportunities to link its research to gender portals around the Pacific. In the future, the Fund will explore the possibility of developing a research strategy. In the meantime, the Fund’s website will be the primary platform for partners and stakeholders to access research and information generated by the Fund. The Fund’s research will also be shared with Pacific Women, whose website hosts a comprehensive number of research and resources on gender equality in the Pacific. The Fund will explore opportunities to present research findings at fora such as the annual Australian Aid Conference (held in February) at the Australian National University and Pacific Update conference (held every July) at the University of the South Pacific, IWDA organised events to name a few.

Depending on the nature of the research, the Fund will work with research consultants in producing 1-4-page briefs of the research for dissemination which would be linked to the full-copy of the report on the website. Two research projects planned for 2018 include an exploration of philanthropy in the Pacific, and another on disability.

The Fund will also produce learning papers on thematic areas in relation to the Fund’s work. These papers will capture best practice and lessons learned from the implementation of the Fund’s objectives and may inform the Fund’s future work and that of other stakeholders.

9.3 Advocacy and networking

Meeting objective: All

Relevance to target audience: All

An important element of this Strategy will be the ongoing identification (by the Fund’s implementation and management team responsible for communications) of suitable opportunities to advocate for women’s empowerment and gender equality in relevant public and private forums. Fijian and Australian Government leaders who will perform this advocacy role will include the Fiji’s Minister for Women, Children and Poverty Alleviation; Fiji’s Director for Women; Australia’s Minister for Foreign Affairs; Australia’s Minister for International Development and the Pacific; and Australia’s Global Ambassador for Women and Girls. Fijian representatives on the Pacific Women Advisory Board; members of the Fund’s Steering Committee and the Fund Manager are also important advocates of the Fund.

The Fund will assist the advocates in their public and private engagement. Advocates will require timely access to information that is up-to-date, accurate and adapted to the needs for engagements. The Fund will compile a calendar of events (and update it throughout the year) during its annual planning process to support the strategic advocacy approach outlined above.

9.4 Developing capacity for strategic communications

The Fund will assist partners, specifically its grantees, to use communications to effectively promote women’s empowerment and gender equality. This will be achieved through a range of tailored capacity development activities, which will be designed and resourced, based on the specific needs identified by the grantees. These needs will be identified through various mechanisms, including direct feedback from consultations, as well as grantee needs assessments. Methodologies may include technical advice, support, communications workshops and mentoring. To ensure the efficient use of resources and avoid unnecessary duplication, the Fund will partner with other organisations, including grantees with strong communications skills as appropriate to deliver capacity development activities.

The Fund’s Communications Officer may also procure Short-Term Advisors (STAs) to respond to capacity development requests if required.

5 The yet to be finalised Capacity Development Strategy is proposing a process where assessment will be done in a series of ways: 1) grantees self-identifying their capacity development needs; 2) the Fund identifying the need through assessment of key organisational documents; 3) the Fund undertaking follow-up meetings / workshops after the organisational assessment; and 4) the Fund and grantees engaging in talanoa sessions (informal conversations).
10 Monitoring, evaluation and learning

The Communications Strategy implementation plan is aligned with the Fund’s Capacity Development Strategy to ensure relevant capacity development activities are included in the plan for 2018-June 2019.

The internal annual planning and review process of the Communications Strategy will consider how well the knowledge and learnings generated from monitoring, evaluation and research processes and activities were collected, aggregated, analysed and refined into user friendly formats and disseminated to intended users.

The Communications Strategy will use the following criteria to monitor and evaluate its performance. This is in line with the Fund’s MEL Plan, which focuses specifically on program level inquiry questions.

» Relevance: Has the Fund’s Communications Strategy met the needs of its beneficiaries? Is the communication mode, language, and content suitable, given the context?

» Effectiveness: Has the Fund’s Communication’s Strategy met its objectives?

» Efficiency: Has the Fund’s Communication Strategy been implemented using value for money?

» Impact: Has the Fund’s Communication Strategy contributed to long-term change for women in Fiji, particularly those who are marginalised?

» Sustainability: Has the Fund’s Communications Strategy contributed to the Fund’s ability to garner support and mobilise resources.
The table below shows how the Fund intends to monitor and evaluate its communications activities against its objectives that work towards meeting the Fund’s long-term outcomes.

Annex 3  Style Guide

Fiji Women’s Fund

January 2018

This guideline aims to provide editorial and branding guidance to ensure consistency in all communication material developed by and for the Fiji Women Fund (the Fund). This guide may also be helpful to the Fund’s partners and stakeholders who may use the Fund’s logo in their own communication materials.

Part 1 – Editorial

Useful to: The Fund staff, DFAT, Cardno, Grantees, Steering and Grants Committee, Consultants

Terminology

This is a living document and will continue to be updated by the Fund on an ongoing basis

Fiji Women’s Fund  » This is the full name of the initiative and should be used in full the first time in all written documents

The Fund (or the Fund if in the middle of a sentence)  » This is the abbreviated name of the initiative

The Fund’s Implementation Team  » This is the staff in Suva that implements the day-to-day activities of the Fund

The Fund’s Management Team  » This the Fund Manager (managing the Implementation Team), DFAT program management team for the Fund, and Cardno

Steering Committee  » This is the committee that provides overall strategic guidance and support to the Fund including the allocation of funds

Grants Committee  » This is the committee that is responsible for assessing and selecting proposals for funding and/or technical assistance allocation, for the Fund

Partners and Stakeholders

For the Fund:

» Partners are agencies that have formal relationships with the Fund and contribute directly to its implementation. They include grantees, members of the Steering and Grants Committees, DFAT program management team for the Fund; and Cardno.

» Stakeholders are part of a broader group of agencies with whom the Fund may not have a formal relationship but who are also important to the Fund’s success.

Grantees

» Grantees are women’s groups, networks, and organisations that receive funding and/or technical assistance from the Fund

Pacific Women Shaping Pacific Development (Pacific Women)

» This is the full name of the program the Fund is an initiative of under the program’s Fiji Country Plan.

» The abbreviated form is Pacific Women and should always be italicised.

Outcomes

The Fund’s end of investment outcomes by 2022:

» Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are empowered and have the capacity (knowledge, skills, resources and relationships) to contribute to transformative change that improves women’s lives.

» Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are having influence at different levels (individual/systemic and
Communications Strategy 2018–2022

» The Fund has transitioned to an independent local entity and has secured funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy.

The Fund’s key communications messages

» Achieving women’s empowerment and gender equality is crucial to the political, economic and social development of Fiji.

» The causes and consequences of gender inequality are complex and interrelated. Effective responses must be flexible to Fiji’s political, cultural and social contexts.

» Women’s groups, networks, and organisations are crucial to achieving women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji.

» The Fund is a grant mechanism that provides funding and capacity development support to women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji to expand and enhance their work on women’s empowerment and gender equality.

» The Fund can play a role in supporting women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji through funding efforts by the women’s movement and supporting capacity development.

» The Fund is flexible, responsive and an accessible mechanism for supporting the women’s movement to advance gender equality in Fiji.

» The Fund is an Australian Government funded initiative, supporting local efforts and will transition into an independently funded and locally managed women’s fund by the end of 2022.

Initiative

» This term is also used when referring to the Fund. For example, the Fund is an initiative of Pacific Women.

Thematic Areas

The Fund works towards:

» Eliminating violence against women

» Empowering women through increased economic opportunities

» Improving women’s participation in leadership and decision-making

» Strengthening women’s groups and coalitions for change.

Australia’s Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT)

» The full name of the Department should be used the first time

» The acronym DFAT can be used thereafter

Capacity Development

» The Fund uses capacity development and not ‘capacity building’. Capacity development is defined as knowledge, skills resources and relationships

Standard blurb on the Fund

Pacific Women Shaping Pacific Development (Pacific Women) was announced by the Australian Government at the Pacific Island Leaders’ Forum meeting in August 2012. It commits up to AU$320 million over 10 years in the 14 Pacific Islands Forum members. The program aims to improve opportunities for the political, economic and social advancement of Pacific women.

Pacific Women is managed by Australia’s Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) and works with a wide range of implementing partners, including the 14 partner governments, multilateral organisations, international and national NGOs and civil society organisations.

The Fiji Women’s Fund (the Fund) is an initiative of the Pacific Women Shaping Pacific Development (Pacific Women) Program. The Fund will commit up to AU$10.5 million from 2017 to 2022. It will provide funding and capacity development support to women’s groups, networks, and organisations in Fiji to expand and enhance their work on women’s empowerment and gender equality. The aim of the Fund is to become an independently funded and managed women’s fund by the end of 2022, and it seeks the following outcomes:
Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are empowered and have the capacity (knowledge, skills, resources and relationships) to contribute to transformative change that improves women’s lives.

Women’s groups, organisations, or networks supported by the Fund are having influence at different levels (individual / systemic and formal / informal) and are contributing to transformative change in women’s lives.

The Fund has transitioned to an independent local entity and has secured funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy.

The Fund will initially be co-located with the existing Pacific Women Support Unit office in Suva, Fiji and operate as an independent entity to support grant and capacity building activities of Fiji-based implementing partners. An initial Fund implementation team will be comprised of the Fund Manager, the Finance and Administration Officer, two Program Officers, a Capacity Development Specialist and a Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning Officer.

The Fund has established Steering Committee to provide overall strategic guidance and support to the Fund including the allocation of funds. It is comprised of representatives from DFAT, the Fiji Ministry of Women, Children and Poverty Alleviation’s Department of Women, the Pacific Women Support Unit, women’s civil society organisations and the Fijian private sector.

The Fund has established a Grants Committee to assess and select proposals for funding and/or technical assistance allocation. It is comprised of representatives from DFAT, the Pacific Women Support Unit, Steering Committee and women’s movement/civil society.

Text Colour

Aside from black, purple and blue may also be used. See Part 2: Branding, for the Fund’s official primary and secondary colours.

Spacing

» Before / After: 0 pt / 6 pt
» Line Spacing: Single

Writing style

» Use active language over passive voice (Mary spoke to John, not John was spoken to by Mary)
» Plain English, short words
» Avoid normative / ethical words and terms (example, ‘obviously’)

Names

» Use a person’s full name when first writing about them, then surname with honorific. Use an honorific before all names.
» Use Ms rather than Miss or Mrs
» State a person’s name, then their designation, example, Ms Michelle Reddy, Fiji Women’s Fund Manager
» Do not put a period after Ms

Photo attribution

» State the photographer and then the Fund’s name after the photo caption. Example: Women marching for their rights on International Women’s Day. Photo: Michelle Reddyy / Fiji Women’s Fund

Short, sharp, concise

» Cut as many words as possible, especially where two words are telling the reader the same thing, e.g. ‘annually meet each March’ (just ‘meet each March’) or ‘general public’ (just ‘public’)
» Minimal use of filler terms (e.g. ‘a total of…’ or ‘in order to…’)

Acronyms

» Keep to a minimum – if a term or title is used less than five times in a long report, consider not using the acronym
» When used, spell out in full the first time followed by the acronym in brackets

Capital letters

» Overuse of capital letters makes a document ‘heavy’ and ruins the flow of the text
» Use title case for level 1 headings (example, Capital Cities Around The World) and sentence case for all lower-level headings (example, Capital cities around the world)
» Do not use block capitals

Bullet points

» Lower case – ends in semi-colon ‘;’
» Upper case – ends in a full stop ‘.’
» Purple bullet points first, then hollow circles (i.e. used in this document)

Italics

» Only for titles of books, journals, periodicals, legislation, foreign words, technical terms
» Use for an important idea or word. Example, let’s work together to achieve something great

Quotation marks

» Single quotation marks

Spelling

» Australian English spelling, i.e. s not z
Figures

- ‘One’ to ‘nine’ and ‘10’ thereafter
- Do not start sentences with a numeral
- Thousands are marked with commas: 1,000,000
- No th - not 27th December, just 27 December

Percent

- Use ‘per cent’ and not percent or %

Gender disaggregated data

- There were 200 workshop participants (120 women and 80 men)
- Not referred to as ‘120 females and 80 males’; or ‘120w 80m’
- Women, then men, then girls, then boys

Oxford comma

- Not unless necessary to avoid ambiguity

Common terms used by the Fund

- Adviser, not advisor; as taken from the DFAT / Cardno Head Contract
- Public, not general public
- Learned, not learnt

Hyphens and En Dash

- Hyphen joins compound words: decision-making; short-term; gender-based violence
- En dash separates a range of dates or numbers: 1-9; July-December (no space)

DFAT Request

- Short rather than long words
- Be concise – sentences less than 20 words and paragraphs less than eight lines
- Think twice about using adjectives
- Do not use jargon, clichés and euphemisms
- Do not use contractions: ‘didn’t’
- Avoid:
  - Gerunds: substituting a noun with a verb plus ‘-ing’
  - Widows and orphans: These are lines at the beginning or end of a paragraph, which are left dangling at the top or bottom of a column, separated from the rest of the paragraph
  - Personification: ‘Fiji or Australia believes’
  - ‘But’ when you mean ‘and’
  - ‘Issue’ when you mean ‘matter’

Checklist before sending to Cardno or DFAT

- Did you read (and edit) this from the reader’s perspective, not the writer’s perspective
- Did you cut all the words you could; it’s like packing, take half out of what you think you need
- Did you do a spell check, with the report’s language in ‘English (Australia)’
- If in doubt, just ask; or highlight for final proof reader to make the final call

Australian Government Branding Guidelines

All Fund communication materials must follow the Australian Government guidelines which can be found on the DFAT website. The Fund is subject to certain exceptions, which are detailed in the following section on the Fund’s identity.

The Fund’s Identity

The Fund has standard formats that apply to all communications materials. It maintains visual identity guidelines, which ensure compliance with Australian Government guidelines mentioned above as well as coherence and uniformity between all the materials produced by the Fund.

In order to follow the Fund’s outcome to transition into an independent entity, DFAT has endorsed the Fund to deviate from the standard guidelines and to portray an independent visual identity. This means that there are times when the Australian Aid identifier is not used. This allows the Fund to portray itself as an independent entity so that it can be recognised as a local initiative, particularly during negotiations with potential local partners. The decision to include the Australian Aid identifier is determined by the Fund and DFAT on a case-by-case basis, however, if precedence has been set for a communications material, it does not usually require further discussion, for example, the Fund’s business cards do not have the Australian Aid identifier but its banners do.

Colours
The Fund’s logo has double lines, which symbolises individual strands being woven into a mat. This is intentional as it communicates the idea of women working together and supporting each other. The Fund’s logo is the most valuable asset of the brand and an instantly recognisable symbol of the initiative. Wherever possible the logo with the full name of the Fiji Women’s Fund should be used. The logo and the full name are of a fixed size and position relative to one another and should not be altered in any way. Never attempt to recreate the logo and always use the master artwork supplied. Do not distort the logo by scaling it disproportionality. If you are resizing it on a Microsoft Word document, hold down the SHIFT key while scaling it.

Primary – the stacked and horizontal versions of the logo in the brand colours are preferred to be used

Note: The Fund does not prefer the logo to be used with the Fund’s name. They can be however, used for other design purposes.

Reverse usage

The logo should only appear on a white background, brand colour background or neutral areas of photography. It must never appear over busy areas of photography, or on patterns.

Partners

With the Australian Aid identifier

The Fund will work in collaboration with DFAT to decide on the placement of logos on a case-by-case basis, however the Fund’s logo must always be more prominent.
Below is an example of how it has been used for an employment opportunity with the Fund:

The Fiji Women’s Fund (the Fund), supported by the Australian Government and implemented by Cardno, is an initiative of the Pacific Women Shaping Pacific Development Program (Pacific Women) and commits up to AUD$0.5 million from 2017 to 2022. It will provide funding and capacity development support to women’s groups, organisations and networks. Fiji a grant to expand and enhance their work on women’s empowerment and gender equality. The aim of the Fund is to become an independently funded and managed women’s fund by the end of 2022, and it seeks the following outcomes:

- Women’s groups, organisations or networks supported by the Fund are empowered and have the capacity to contribute to transformative change that improves women’s lives.

- The Fund has transitioned to an independent legal entity and has secured funding from donors, private sector, and local philanthropy.

FWF is currently seeking applications for a suitably qualified Program Officer to support the Fund Manager in all areas of activity management, planning, implementation, monitoring and reporting of Fund activities including grant management, oversight of grant allocation and accountability requirements.

The Program Officer will work closely with Fund grantees and key stakeholders, including women’s civil society organisations, the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, and the Pacific Women Support Unit. The role will require the Program Officer to establish and maintain harmonious and effective relationships and undertake all duties to a high professional standard. The Program Officer will work closely with other members of the Fund implementation team to ensure that grants activities are managed efficiently and effectively, that grants are provided with high-quality management support, and that Fund reports and communication products are of a high quality.

Fiji nationals, particularly women, are strongly encouraged to apply. Ability to speak local vernacular (Fijian and I Tokelau) will be an asset.

Positions are open to Fiji nationals and permanent residents with authority to live and work in Fiji. A competitive salary package will be offered to the preferred candidate in line with local labour laws.

To view a detailed position description, and to lodge an expression of interest in this position, please visit www.cardno.com/jobs and search “Program Officer” in the Key Word field. Further enquiries can be directed to: simon.wallace@cardno.com. Only shortlisted candidates will be contacted for interview.

Cardno is an equal opportunity employer and is committed to child protection in all fields. Successful applicants may be required to provide a police clearance certificate.

Applications close 1:00pm (Suva) on Wednesday 11 October 2017
Annex 4  Social Media Guidelines

Fiji Women’s Fund

January 2018

(Excerpted from Pacific Women’s Social Media Strategy and User Guideline)

Executive summary

These guidelines are designed to provide helpful, practical and strategic communications advice, and protect the Fiji Women’s Fund (the Fund) brand. It is divided into two parts. Part 1 provides all staff of the Fund with general guidelines for their own engagement with social media. Part 2 provides more detailed objectives, goals and administration protocols for staff responsible for managing the Fund’s digital communications platforms.

The Fund embraces the fact that its partners and stakeholders are increasingly online and these platforms provide dynamic and interactive spaces to promote and discuss issues supporting the Fund’s commitment to advancing women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji. While communication on behalf of the Fund is the primary responsibility of the part-time Communications Officer, the Fund recognises that staff members can also further the aim of the program by using social media platforms. The Fund recognises the wide reach that communication in online communities can have - both positive and negative. This guideline encourages the Fund’s staff to use social media responsibly to communicate about topics within their areas of expertise, as long as this does not interfere with their primary duties or the security of the IT systems.

Digital communication platforms (website, E-updates, and social media platforms) are an important part of the Fund’s Communications Strategy (2018-2022) to share information and collaborate with audiences to advocate for women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji. The Fund will set-up all these platforms in early 2018.

The Fund recognises that social media will also be critical to driving users to its website. The immediacy and reach of social media, together with its blurring of traditional lines of personal/private and public communications requires a strategy to both protect the Fund’s reputation and provide guidelines for both the management and staff use of social media platforms.

While developing the In the development of the strategy the Fund consulted with the (now completed) Pacific Leadership Program, a similar DFAT-funded program with like audiences successfully operating Facebook and Twitter accounts, and engaged with DFAT’s Digital Communication Hub in Canberra to understand best practice policies and procedures for managing risk. Best practice social media policy and guidelines for International Red Cross, Hootsuite, Cambridge University and the Canadian Government were also reviewed.
Introduction

With this guideline, the Fund aims to raise its profile, protect its reputation and set out a clear set of rules for staff to follow. It sets out the aims and objectives, and administration and risk management practices for the Fund’s digital communication platforms. It also sets standards for staff use to create consistency across channels.

The guideline covers the range of social media and content sharing platforms which will gradually be integrated into the Fund, principally through the new website. These include:

» The Fund’s website
» The Fund’s Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and Flickr pages (established prior to the website launch)
» The Fund will review the setup of LinkedIn, Instagram and others during its annual review in January 2019

Key objectives

All digital communications platforms have the following interlinked aims:

1. Enable the Fund to participate in key digital platforms for discussion and information sharing

   Facebook and to a lesser extent Twitter have a growing presence and influence in Fiji, particularly among young people and leaders. These platforms will enable the Fund to project a positive image of the initiative, engage with people on women’s empowerment and gender equality issues, publicise activities, outcomes and research and, foster a greater understanding of Fiji’s and Australia’s gender equality policies in the Pacific.

   Goal 1: Two social media posts per week

2. Drive traffic to the Fund’s website

   Social media content can drive Fijian audiences to the new website which aside from informing users of the latest news from the Fund, will also provide funding, partnership, and employment related opportunities for Fijian women and organisations.

   Goal 2: 20 per cent increase in web traffic in 12 months, after doing a baseline (via Google analytics) at six months.

3. Increase visibility of the Fund by leveraging social media content sharing between the Fund and its partners and stakeholders

   As the Fund is new, it’s imperative that it builds a credible profile among all its partners and stakeholders. Digital is a low-cost way to increase engagement and profile. The Fund can also benefit from staff, partners and stakeholders engaging in its social media presence.

   Goal 3: Two shares of the Fund’s social media posts per month by its partners and stakeholders.

   Goal 4: All Fund staff to receive basic training in social media.
Goal 5: 80 per cent of staff have at least a Facebook account and actively engage in the Fund’s digital communication platforms.

Audiences

» Young people and more specifically, young women.

» The politically inclined, urban elites and activists: access to office-based computers, or money for 3/4G mobile phone sets and data, and strong signal means politicians, government officials and public servants, and urban elites have access to Facebook and may be opinion leaders, and/or partners to of the Fund.

» The Fund’s partners: those with formal relationships with the Fund and contribute directly to its implementation. They include grantees; members of the Steering Committee comprised of representatives from DFAT, the Fiji Ministry of Women, Children and Poverty Alleviation’s Department of Women, the Pacific Women Support Unit, women’s civil society organisations and the Fijian private sector; members of the Grants Committee; DFAT program management team for the Fund; and Cardno.

» The Fund’s stakeholders: part of a broader group of agencies with whom the Fund may not have a formal relationship but who are also important to the Fund’s success. They include the Fiji women’s movement (who may become potential partners) especially those living in rural and remote locations, with disabilities, and those facing discrimination; CSOs; government ministries and departments; development agencies; other local, regional and global women’s funds; potential donors, private sector organisations, and local philanthropy; media; and the public.

They can ‘share’ posts and reach a broader audience than the Fund’s own partner audience.

Who are these guidelines for?

If you are a Fund staff, Cardno staff and/or DFAT staff involved in the Fund’s implementation and use social media tools such as Facebook, Twitter, YouTube or Flickr, then these guidelines are for you. In the online world, ‘personal’ and ‘private’ are no longer the same. Social media conversations can be found through search engines like Google. Even in cases where only your contacts can see what you write, there is a possibility that one of them will forward what you say and make it visible to a wider audience. As a result, personal conversation within social media networks should be considered ‘public’ rather than ‘private’.

The guidelines also define the Fund’s protocols for creating, editing, approving and managing digital communications. While principally the role of the part-time Communications Officer, all staff should be engaged in the Fund’s digital communications, to create and amplify interesting and relevant content.
Part 1 – Staff Social Media Guidelines*

Four guidelines to protect and promote the Fund and your own digital identity:

1. Engage with the Fund’s website, E-Updates, and social media platforms

   Social media operates on like, follow and share algorithms. Make sure you are subscribed to E-Updates, like/follow the Fund’s platforms and share through your own digital networks to amplify engagement and discussion of the Fund’s digital content.

2. Add a disclaimer to your social media pages

   If you have a blog, a Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, YouTube, GooglePlus or LinkedIn account, and talk about work-related issues, add a disclaimer to each of your personal pages making clear that the views you express are yours alone. Be aware that this disclaimer does not free you from the obligations you may have under the Cardno Social Media Policy and DFAT’s Digital Media Strategy 2016–18. Example text you can use: ‘The postings on this site are my own and do not necessarily represent positions, strategies or opinions of The Fiji Women’s Fund’ - added to the ‘About Me’ section of your page.

3. Keep your manager in the loop

   Obtain permission before publishing anything related to your function or assignment. This also applies to blogs and similar online publications. To avoid problems, discuss your work-related social media activities with the part-time Communications Officer and the Fund Manager.

4. Discretionary use of social media by staff

   Staff should be aware that the Fund its partners and stakeholders may observe content and information made available by staff through social media. Therefore, use your best judgment in posting material that is neither inappropriate nor harmful to the Fund its partners and stakeholders.

   *Also refer to the Cardno Social Media Policy and DFAT’s Digital Media Strategy 2016–18.

Part 2 – Administration Guidelines

Facebook

The Fund will submit a Business Case to DFAT for the establishment of a Facebook page. The suggested username for page: Fiji Women’s Fund / @fijiwomensfund. Upon approval by DFAT, the Fund will establish a page.
The following are ‘page roles’ assigned on Facebook for the Fund’s page:

Twitter, YouTube and Flickr

The Fund will submit a Business Case to DFAT for the establishment of for the following social media accounts- Flickr, Twitter and YouTube. The suggested username for page: Fiji Women’s Fund / @fijiwomensfund. Upon approval by DFAT, the Fund will establish a page.

Suggested username for accounts is: Fiji Women’s Fund / @fijiwomensfund

There is no scope for multiple roles in the managing of these pages. The Communications Officer and Fund Manager will have complete access to the accounts. It is the Communications Officer’s role to manage, monitor all aspects of the Fund’s presence on these platforms, listen for related conversations and be responsible for its security. She/he will follow the same process for drafting and approval as in the case for Facebook. This is outlined below.

Password access

Only the Fund’s Communications Officer and the Fund Manager will have access to the account. Staff must close the account once edits are complete (i.e. staff must monitor from their own personal account and not leave the page open). The accounts must be set up using a new email and not be created under an individual’s profile. In Facebook’s case this safeguards the Fund’s account from being blocked if Facebook blocks the administrator for issues related to their personal account. As email service Gmail must be used to create platforms such as YouTube and Flickr, it is suggested that the Fund’s Gmail account be used to create all the accounts (the Fund already has a Gmail account). Passwords will change when staff leave or change roles and will be routinely changed every three months to reduce risk.

Type of content to be posted

» Wherever possible, content will be cross-posted between the Fund’s website and social media pages. These include links to latest news; E-Updates; newsletter; funding partnership and employment opportunities; resources; research and other information posted on the website.

» Share information from the Fund’s partners.
» Share other information of interest to gender equality in Fiji (and where relevant, in the Pacific and international).
» Share outcomes from international, regional, national and community meetings and dialogues the Fund is engaged in.
» Share good news/stories of change of the Fund.
» Include descriptive text when you post an image. This ensures accessibility to people with a visual disability who use a screen reader. Some social media platforms, such as Twitter, have an added feature, which allows you to provide alternative text to images in a tweet, but you must go to your settings to turn the feature on.

Roles: who will source, edit and approve the content?

All Fund staff will be responsible for sourcing content, including the Communications Officer. However, the Communications Officer will be responsible for editing and approving content. The Fund Manager will also have the same administration, editing and approval rights as a backup, and be responsible for approving content that is a response to a posted comment or question.

For a two-month trial period after the introduction of the social media pages, the Communications Officer will send proposed content for approval to the Fund Manager and the DFAT Program Manager where applicable. Following the trial, the Fund Manager will assess whether the Communications Officer needs to send content for approval. The Fund Manager, in consultation with DFAT will approve posts considered high profile or sensitive in nature.

How often will original content be posted?

How will public comments and questions be monitored and responded to?

Posts by external users on the Fund’s social media pages will initially be switched off, but comments on the Fund’s posts will be enabled. After three months, the Fund will review the nature of the comments received and may allow users to post on the Fund’s page but posts will only be made public after it is review by the administrators.

For a trial period of three months the Communications Officer will monitor the Fund social media pages using Hootsuite. After the trial, training of an additional support staff in Hootsuite will be reviewed as a backup to the Communications Officer. Hootsuite is a social media management tool, which allows the user to manage multiple networks and profiles and measure campaign results.

» Notifications will be configured to show when comments are posted.
» Hootsuite will also be configured to monitor for social media mentions of the Fund, including the name of the Fund Manager.
» Facebook will be established and managed through the Facebook Business Manager interface.
» Otherwise, Hootsuite will be checked three times a day – 9am, midday, 4pm.

The Fund Manager, will also have the same administration, editing and approval rights as a backup for when the Communications Officer is absent, and be responsible for approving content where the Risk Management Protocol is required. If Level 2 of the Risk Management Strategy is reached (where a comment is extremely negative/insulting or trolling), escalation for managing and approving responses will go to the Fund Manager and copying the DFAT Program Manager, if needed.

Risk management protocol

1. Each social media page will have the following Terms of Use statement in the About section

This page has been established by the Fiji Women’s Fund (the Fund) to provide an interactive space to promote and discuss issues and ideas related to women’s empowerment and gender equality in Fiji, specifically in the areas of eliminating violence against women, economic empowerment, leadership and decision-making, and strengthening women’s groups and coalitions for change. Comments and questions relevant to the post/discussion are highly encouraged, however language should be courteous, respectful and without harassment or discrimination. Comments that are offensive, abusive, discriminatory, and aggressive or breach confidentiality, will be deleted. A person repeatedly posting offensive comments will be blocked.
2. Assessment and review of questions and comments

Highly offensive comments/trolling (multiple comments in an hour)
- Screen shot emailed to Fund Manager
- After consultation, comment deleted, user notified and blocked
- If needed, response content developed
- Communications Officer to increase monitoring

Irrelevant comment
- Users referred to the Terms of Use statement
- Comments that fail to adhere to this, or deemed offensive
- Screen shot emailed to Fund Manager. After consultation, comment may be deleted

Negative comment on Fijian and Australian government/policies
- Screen shot emailed to Fund Manager/DFAT Program Manager for review and Actioning as deemed appropriate
- Response content developed
- Communications Officer to increase monitoring

Positive comment
- ‘Like’ and reply with brief positive comment

Very positive captured for reporting
- Question
  - Immediately sent reply: ‘Thanks for your question, we’ll get back to you soon’.
  - Forwarded to relevant area program manager for a reply, cc’ing Fund Manager
  - User sent approved response

Monitoring and evaluation

The Communications Officer and or a delegated staff member will do screen grabs of each posts receiving good engagement. Responses and relevant comments will be saved with screen shots. This will be done on an ongoing basis.

Create a log to track existing results: follower counts, engagement rates and average activity per week. Likes, page views and statistical updates will be monitored monthly to gauge effectiveness of page. Popular posts will be noted and lessons learned will be shared with staff and during staff meetings. Hootsuite analytics will be used into the Fund’s reporting.

Monitoring the response from your community is also important. Often your followers will be vocal about what kind of activity and content they appreciate, and what they do not, so do take into account their feedback. This will inform the overall Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning of the Communications Strategy and the initiative.

- Highly offensive comments / trolling (multiple comments in an hour)

Annex 5  Press Release Process and Template

A press release is an official announcement issued to the news media, although increasingly it is also sent beyond the media. The heading should contain action verbs, the first paragraph should answer the: who, what, why and where. The press release should contain understandable language and a quote(s). Traditionally, the spokesperson of the organisation is always the first person quoted. Others may be quoted after her.

Most press releases are succinct at just a page long, or two pages maximum. Ultimately, organisations want to provide enough information so that news outlets have sufficient material for publishing their own stories about whatever the organisation is announcing in the release.

- Decide on the topic and objective of the press release – what is it for? It could range from: launch of the Fund; release of a key publication / report; introduction of a partnership; event; opinion on an issue of national importance, and so on.
- Clarify your deadlines and communicate those deadlines to all parties. If a release has a scheduled day to go out, make sure you can get it approved long before then, 24 to 48 hours in advance.
- Know ahead of time how many people need to approve the press release. Anticipate delays. Not everyone likes to write first drafts of anything, but almost everyone tends to contribute after the fact. It is possible that more people will insert themselves into the approval process at the last minute.

Proposed process

- The Fund’s Communications Officer writes the first draft of the press release.
- She/he sends it to the Fund Manager for feedback and approval.
- Once the Fund Manager approves, the Communications Officer sends the draft to the DFAT Program Manager for feedback. Note: DFAT has its own approval process and type of approval may depend on the nature of the content. DFAT Suva post clearance period is three working days but may vary depending on duty travel and major events.
- The Communications Officer incorporates all edits and circulates the amended copy for final approval. This is important as the press release may go through many drafts.
- If the Fund is issuing the press release in collaboration with a partner, the partner also needs to be part of the drafting and approval process.
- The Fund releases the press release to the news media via email and sends it to key partners and stakeholders via its various platforms.

Annex 7  Communication Checklist for Events / Meetings

The Fund will develop a communications plan for any event and/or meeting the Fund considers important to document and communicate to partners and stakeholders. The communications plan will outline relevant activities, timelines, responsibilities and resources needed. Some things to consider and important questions to ask to develop the communications plan, include:

» Establishing process and chain of command - identifying the event focal point (the person in charge of the event) and core members of organising team.

» Purpose of event – have agreed standard text to describe the event – the who, what, where, why, and when. This will make drafting communication materials easier.

» Stakeholders - is the event organised in collaboration with another organisation? What are their requirements? Ensure there is a clear decision-making process in place.

» Spokesperson - will there be one? What will be her role and what sort of support will she need?

» Promotion and outreach – do we need press releases, social media prompts, guest and media invites, interviews to be organised, and communication materials to be developed?

» Documenting – will the event need to be recorded? Photographed? Ensure that all communication materials produced for the event, including audio/visual documentation is appropriately labelled and saved on the Fund’s knowledge management system.

» Roles on the day – aside from the Fund Manager who will speak to the news media, will there be other people handling media queries prior and during event and setting up interviews for Fund Manager and other partner and or stakeholder spokesperson? It is important not to have one person do multiple roles. For example, if the Fund Manager is the spokesperson, should she also MC the event? If she can do both, then another person should handle media queries, such as the Communications Officer. It can become quite overwhelming if one person is handling multiple roles.

» Monitoring - if the event was an external one involving media, check to see if there was any coverage. Share these with partners and stakeholders via the Fund’s various platforms, and especially if you plan on sending a thank you/update email.
Annex 8  Interview Documentation Checklist

Interviews are valuable because:

» They can generate unique and refreshing content for your audience. Your organisation does not need to be the expert to deliver expert advice.

» They can raise your organisation’s level of authority or credibility simply because of the public association that you have with the interviewee.

» Your organisation’s builds a relationship with the person you are interviewing, which could possibly lead to other growth opportunities for your organisation’s brand in the future.

Interviews are especially important for organisation’s supporting women’s empowerment and gender equality like the Fiji Women’s Fund because:

» They can play an important role in amplifying the voices of women and raise consciousness and awareness about women’s stories and struggles, especially of those often marginalised.

» They support women to tell their own stories.

Checklist

Any interview (or multimedia content including photographs) procured by the Fund should have the following:

» Completed Consent Form

» Date of the interview/interaction

» Details of interviewee/subject – this is also part of the Consent Form

» Details of the interviewer/photographer

» Purpose of the interview/interaction

» Copies of the interview transcript, interview questions, final story, and any multimedia content must be appropriately labelled and saved on the Fund’s knowledge management system.

An example:

Interview date: 25 January 2018

Interviewee: Ms Mere Singh – Coordinator, Girls Are Us. Telephone: +679 345 6789 Email: mere.singh@girlsareus.com.fj

Interviewer: Michelle Reddy, Fund Manager, Fiji Women’s Fund (if the Fund has hired an external person to undertake this interview, such as a short-term communications person, include their contact details)

Purpose of the interview: Girls Are Us, a grantee of the Fund, will be having a weeklong event to acknowledge International Women’s Day. Ms Singh gave a background to the upcoming event, the publication that will be launched and how the public can be involved.
The story will serve as a build-up to the event and will be shared on the Fund’s website and social media platforms. The Fund also intends to attend the event and take some photos, which Ms Singh is happy with.

Interview tips

When interviewing someone for the Fiji Women’s Fund’s work, the following check list must be followed as closely as possible:

Identify the purpose of the interview - Why do you need to conduct it? What is the point? Keep your audience in mind when determining this. An example could be, you want to tell your audience how the Fund’s grantees acknowledged International Women’s Day. Three of the grantees did something special and you think this would make a good story.

Identify the platform the story will be featured on. Will this be internal or external? If its external, decide on the platforms – website, newsletters, social media, annual progress reports, and so on. This is important for two reasons:

- It helps you gather information and frame the story accordingly, and
- You need consent from the interviewee to feature the story on these platforms.

Do proper planning - Ensure your timelines and approval processes are clear. You should give yourself and the interviewee enough time to produce quality content, keeping in mind any approval requirements. It is unprofessional to call a person for an interview the day before a story needs to be published. Avoid making a late request due to poor planning.

Identify the interviewee – Discuss with colleagues at the Fund, who might be the best person from the grantee organisation (if that’s the partner / stakeholder) to interview. Some organisations have designated spokespersons; however, you may also get an opportunity to interview other staff or even some of the women the grantee organisation works with. Be open to opportunities.

Pre-Interview Homework - There are few things that you should do before the interview happens:

- Understand a little bit about the organisations first and the person who has been identified as the interviewee. You are of course, conducting an interview to learn more about a person and what they do, but as the interviewer you should know a little bit more than your audience so that you can properly introduce the person and ask the right questions. If you can find an existing interview with the person on another website, that will be helpful too so you can gauge their style and tone, and create questions for that person accordingly.
- Confirm the details of the interview with the person you are interviewing. This is especially important if you’re interviewing someone in a different time zone. Some things to confirm are:
  - Date and time;
  - Method of communication (face-to-face, phone, Skype, email);
  - Approximate length of interview;
  - Ask if they have accessibility issues and how you can best prepare for it;
> Test your recording equipment including camera if it’s a face-to-face interview.
> Prepare a list of questions. See next point for this.

Prepare a list of flexible, open-ended questions and possible follow-up questions - You should prepare a list of questions that will act as sort of a template for the interview - a guide for the direction that you want to take from start to finish. You do not have to stick to the list of questions completely. If you have the time, you may want to workshop the questions with your colleagues. This could also help you ask questions, which may serve other reporting needs for the Fund – but if you do this, make sure the questions are still relevant to the story you are doing. For each question you should come up with two or three possible follow-up questions that might be suitable to ask, depending on the answer. You probably would not get to them all, but because they are there it’s a good reminder just in case the perfect opportunity comes up to dig deeper into a topic of interest. As far as the questions themselves, here are a few basic rules:

» Do not ask YES or NO questions;
» Do not ask more than one question at a time;
» Keep them relevant but be creative.
» Phrase the questions in a way that will allow the person being interviewed to expand; and
» Offer to show the questions to the person you are interviewing to make sure they are comfortable with them, but let me know these are just guiding questions.

Provide a welcoming environment - In order to get the best answers from the people you interview, it’s important to create a welcoming environment for them. If a person is comfortable, they will be able to share better. Some ways to create a comfortable environment for the person you are interviewing:

» Make sure they know all the details about the interview beforehand – what is it for; where will the story appear; will they be recorded; will they be photographed; how this will benefit them, explain to them about the consent form they will need to complete, and so on;
» Ask them if they’d like to see the questions first;
» Discuss with them any risks they may encounter if they share sensitive information. The Fund’s ‘do no harm’ principle is key here. If there is any risk, you need to discuss this with the Fund Manager before proceeding.
» Thank them for the interview before you even start;
» Be enthusiastic and make sure your tone is friendly and welcoming.

Allow the person you’re interviewing to talk - One of the worse things you can do as an interviewer is take over the interview yourself. You should give the person you are interviewing a chance to communicate as much as possible without interruption. The more they talk - the better.

Listen and be engaged - This may sound obvious, but you must listen. Be engaged in the interview - not be just a person who reads the questions aloud. This is much tougher than it sounds. It can often be easy to drift off while the other person is talking, especially if you are recording the interview. It is not that you become bored and uninterested, but you might ‘tune out’ while you wait for her to finish so you can move on to your next question. You can also miss out on important follow-up questions if you are not engaged.

Actually, want to understand - You must want to understand, and this can be done on different levels. On the surface, it is just about understanding the situation or what is happening, for instance, what happened during the International Women’s Day celebrations and why is it important to share that? On a deeper level, however, it becomes much more interesting, both for you as the interviewer and those who will eventually read it or listen to it. On the deeper level, it becomes about why does this person or organisation do what they do, and how.

Consent – Once you have finished with the interview ensure you have gotten written consent from the interviewee. See Annex 6 for the Fund’s Consent Form, which can be used for any audio, visual material as well as interviews/testimonials. Ensure the interviewee has your contact details and ask them if they want to see the story before it is published. File the Consent Form, and any audio/video recording and photos appropriately on the Fund’s knowledge management system.

Note: Rescinding consent – there have been times when an interviewee rescinds consent after giving the interview and / or after publication of the interview. When this happens, you must discuss with the interviewee as to the reason for this. Perhaps there are some errors in the story, which can be easily fixed. Perhaps, the story does not represent who she is anymore or has caused her harm that she did not anticipate when she first did the interview. Whatever the reason, the Fund must collaborate with the interviewee to decide on the best course of action, keeping in mind the Fund’s ‘do no harm’ principle.

Writing the story – When writing the story, use the Fund’s key Communication Principles as a guide.

Approval – Once your story is written or content is produced, ensure all the relevant people approve it before publication. You may need to get multiple approvals depending on the type of the story – ensure you have factored the time and process during the planning stage. If the interviewee has requested to see a copy, ensure this is done and her/his edits are incorporated. An important point to remember is that the Fund is not a news media organisation. Interviewees must be given the opportunity to amend what they said during a live interview. It could be that they may have said something ‘in the moment’ and decide later that it did not represent their views best or was inappropriate. Therefore, getting approval from interviewees is important, especially if interviewees are representatives of governments. This is not only in the best interests of the interviewee, but also of the Fund’s.

Publication – once the story/content is published, make sure you send a link / copy to the interviewee. If the interviewee has accessibility issues, ensure they can access the story in a manner that is easiest for them. It is important to avoid being extractive in nature when gathering content – interviewees must have access to their own stories.

Some tips excerpted from Pat Flynn’s Top 10 Tips for Conducting an Exceptional Interview.
Annex 9  Survey: List of Respondents and Questions

To ascertain the information and communication need of each partner and stakeholder group and the channels of engagement most appropriate and accessible for them, the Fund sought feedback from representatives of the agencies listed in the table below. Online platform SurveyMonkey was used to gather feedback and due care was taken to seek feedback from representatives of women in rural and remote locations, women with disabilities, and those with diverse sexual orientation and/or gender identity. Phone calls were made prior to sending the survey link to ensure accessibility for respondents who may face challenges, with an offer to seek feedback over the phone or face-to-face. In this instance, all 28 respondents had access to the Internet to complete the survey.
